

FORMING OF DISTRICTS

How are districts formed? Where will district offices be located?

Bishop Lowry had conversations with many groups and people throughout the conference on how best to form districts. This was advisory in nature as the Book of Discipline makes it clear the Annual Conference sets the number of districts and the Bishop forms the districts and names district office locations. Bishop Lowry established a sub-committee from the cabinet to study the districts and come with several choices for the Extended Cabinet to discuss. The Alignment Task Force also received some plans from persons in the conference. After much discussion Bishop Lowry named the following districts, locations and district office locations.

Notes:

The purple dots represent churches within the Central Texas Annual Conference. They are not necessarily placed in the precise location of each congregation. The red dots approximate the location of district offices. The North and East District office locations will be finalized after a decision is made regarding the CTC office location, taking into consideration the best use of human and financial resources.
