

Who are our neighbors?

- Spouse of a 9/11 victim left stranded in the middle of her immigration process.
- A hard-working immigrant whose money has gone to pay for worthless legal advice from unscrupulous practitioners.
- A former client who comes with a donation to help the next folks at the door and say thank you.
- A grandmother who cares for her preschool grandchildren who have escaped terror and death in their war torn home country.
- An abused wife whose U.S. citizen husband refuses her access to their child and threatens to have her deported.
- A homeless Iranian man granted the right to remain in the United States.
- A 16-year-old Venezuelan girl receiving vital medical treatment not available in her country.

*Is not this the fast that I choose:
to loose the bonds of wickedness,
to undo the thongs of the yoke,
to let the oppressed go free,
and to break every yoke?
--Isaiah 58:6.*

Justice For Our Neighbors

Throughout the Bible, people of faith are exhorted to show kindness to the strangers in their midst. JFON (Justice for our Neighbors) offers United Methodists a way to be faithful to the call.

JFON is a network in mission of the United Methodist Committee on Relief (UMCOR), Annual Conferences, local congregations, and ecumenical partners. The General Board of Global

Ministries of The United Methodist Church initiated Justice for Our Neighbors (JFON) in 1999 as a response to increasingly complex immigration regulations stemming from the far-reaching immigration law of 1996.

The events of September 11, 2001, have complicated the already difficult situation for sojourners by heightening the level of fear and distrust both in the immigrant community and in the general public which has resulted in severe repercussions for newcomers.

The main goal of JFON is to facilitate the mission of United Methodist local congregations in responding to the immigration needs of the sojourners in our midst.

The Work of Local Churches

Participating congregations operate volunteer-based immigration clinics. To initiate a JFON clinic, each congregation must provide space for a clinic and recruit at least ten committed volunteers who will be trained and supervised by a JFON immigration attorney and staff. The JFON program also offers to the local churches and community at large education for mission, outreach, and advocacy.

The JFON Program is a resource for individual congregations and for its national network of clinics. It is not a funding program. Its network includes United Methodist annual conferences, districts, congregations and ecumenical partners.

Whether migration is a response to God's call to move out of our own context to do God's work or whether it is the result of forced exile, our faith tradition calls us to extend a hospitable welcome to newcomers who live among us.

JFON Fort Worth, Texas

JFON began serving clients in the Fort Worth Texas area in July 1999. Begun as a joint program of Polytechnic UMC, El Buen Samaritano UMC and the United Methodist Committee of Relief, the clinic has served over 800 clients from more than 20 different countries from around the world.

In 2002, a special collaboration between JFON – Fort Worth and Refugee Services of Texas expanded the immigration legal services in the area as the number of refugees increased.
